What's new:

Character Starter Archetype Harbinger of War This archetype is inspired by the class of warrior found in RIFT. Like them they are able to harness the arcane power of super-elemental rings via a mutated power granted by a hatchling Elder Seedling that is a part of their harvest. They are unique in that they are all born to be evil and specialize in an area of pure elements. Warmaster and foundry masters are both designs that fulfill the needs of a small group of individuals that can't be met by a large group of other characters. They have their own benefits in a warren to the requirements of the group. A reaper needs to find the one, but often have many assistants to help them. A warmaster has a small team of masters that works to create and improve their gear, in addition to the raw materials that they will sell. Both options may find reapers and warmasters are similar in that they value equipment, but with a warmaster they will strive to collect more in order to improve its resale value, while a reaper would prefer to use of their plunder to further their own progression. A Harbinger of War is a warrior that specializes in armors made for a specific element that can perform acrobatic maneuvers and has elemental strength. They are usually heavily armored, and are also able to absorb elemental damage through the waves of their armor, leading to elemental powers that dominate the battle. This archetype specializes in melee with bands of elementalized armor. Very strong. Consultants / Alchemists. The reaper class is a collection of specialists to manage the inventory needed to support cold, poison, fire and shock crafts. In addition to inventory management and analysis, they can also teach others, and can teach Elemental Mastery, Alchemy and Weaponcraft skills. They are trained in skill layout and can also teach them. Damage descriptions are subject to change. Overview They have their own inventory and access to all character creation items, including all the crafting tools used to make the items offered through commerce. They are the only character who is able to have access to a cell
