Pin & overlay (Pin & Brag) is a local multiplayer game where two people compete to get the highest score by either pinning other players' connections, or by overlaying their own on their opponents' connections, which then appear on the screen and stay there until someone gets an infinite score or the game ends. The players each have a board with a grid of squares. Each square on the board represents a street in the city (the grid is the map shown here). On their screen, they each see the squares on the other's board. Players can use gestures such as swipes to block their opponents' sight of the squares and still score on the block. For example, if you swipe down, the other player won't be able to see the squares you blocked. If you swipe left, the other player won't be able to see the squares you blocked off and left open, and so on. Players can win by either pinning all of their opponent's connections (blocks them completely off the screen) or by gaining at least one infinite score. Each player wins if he or she earns more points than the other. When the game starts, players aren't shown each other's board but instead can only see their own. One player gets the privilege of choosing the map (the map grid is the 4x4 grid shown here). After starting the game and making the choice of map, players must watch and wait until the other players have joined. If a player doesn't join, he or she does not receive points when that player scores a pin or infinite (the players' names do not appear when they do score). Players can connect to other players' iPhones using Game Center, see the score of their opponents and decide whether or not to play against them, and earn a score for each game they play. When any connection is pinned, it will remain pinned until a player either scores infinite or gets the highest score on the board (which for everyone else will be zero). Scoring: Each time a player enters a square, he or she earns a point. If the square is blocked off, a player scores zero points. The player who enters the last square of a connected player's board scores points equal to the square of that square. If players complete a whole row or column of squares, they score points based on the total square count. Each time a player scores an infinite, he or she scores the whole row or column. The game ends

Castle On The Hill is a four-player, tactical take on the classic game of chess. In Castle On The Hill the object of the game is to build a fortress up to a certain height, while the opponent's concentration on the game. Play takes place on a 7x7 board. Game Setup: The board is set up for four players. Each player is given 10 pieces of paper with the classic chess pieces drawn on them. One piece of paper has the king, one has the queen, two have knights, and one has a rook. After being given the paper, each player is given a number of colored playing pieces of varying sizes. There are six colors of board pieces: Blue, Green, Red, White, Yellow, Black. A set of nine pieces of each color is placed on the board to represent the pawns. The eight pawns on the bottom row are considered the "king's pawns." There are three of these pawns. Three pieces of that color are used as the "queen's pawns." There are three of these pawns. Three pieces of that color are used as the "rook's pawns." There are three of these pawns. Nine pieces of that color are used as the "knight's pawns." There are three of these pawns. Nineteen pieces of that color are used as the "bishop's pawns." There are three of these pawns. The other eight pieces of each color are used as the "king's queen's pawns." There are three of these pawns. The other eight pieces of that color are used as the "king's rook's pawns." There are three of these pawns. The game is set up such that if the blue/green pawns move to the other color, the red/white/yellow/black pawns will move to the other color. Also, if a piece from the "king's pawn" group moves, that color will return the nine pieces (one of each color) to the "queen's pawn" group. For example: A player's blue king, white queen, and black rook are on the board. If the blue king moves, then the white queen will go to the blue color, the black rook will go to the white color

What's new:

The RedSun RTS Medical ("RTS") is a small Unmanned Aerial Vehicle (UAV) aircraft being developed by RedSun MicroSystems Incorporated, formerly known as RedSun Defense Systems Corporation. Unlike many small UAV systems, it is designed with equal parts of flexibility and agility. The airframe is designed for ease of maintenance, to enable UAVs to be deployed where the time from opening the container to the aircraft being in the air is less than 24 hours, and is easy to control. It can carry specialized sensors (single or multispectral) and can be rigged with electrostatic shrouds for concealment. As the market leader in the UAV/UAS market, the RTS has garnered 1.5 billion USD in funding from several sources including DARPA, the Canadian Army, the Israeli Defense Forces, the U.S. Air Force, and the U.S. Navy. Design and specification The RTS was designed in conjunction with the XRV Cargo Air Vehicle at MIT Lincoln Labs. To validate the design the airframe was used to transport a "medical configuration" to multiple airports and back. The initial prototype was experimental and saw flight for the first time on 20 August 2014. The initial prototype had been off the ground for seven months. Following the initial flight of the RTS, the airframe was redesigned with aerodynamic improvements and an increased payload size. Wider fuselage for greater stability and payload, but the design retained most of the features from the first prototype. All of the science that went into the design of the RTS is documented at The Company "RedSun" remains in the commercial zone, while the "RTS" UAV and the XRV Cargo Air Vehicle are in the acquisition zone. An advanced and multi-mission UAV system, the RTS is designed as an easy-to-deploy (1 day) UAV, and has a single redundant engine and stabilization system allowing the aircraft to land in unforeseen situations. This allows the RTS to perform many missions in very small areas of the battle space, including communications relay, decoy or jamming, reconnaissance, precision strikes, delivery of special sensors, communications relay, or light weapons delivery. The aircraft is controlled by three radios. One to control the aircraft, one to control the various payload
